Migrant Women Reality Watch is a new project by the ENOMW Media Hub that will transmit the migrant women's voice, opinion and analysis on the issues relevant to our rights, our dignity and our wellbeing in Europe and beyond.

MWRW MISSION STATEMENT

If aliens descended into any major European news-channel, they would never know that migrant women in Europe exist. That is because we, the migrant women, have almost no media visibility. When we do, it is to speak about us, rather than have us speak. In other domains, we are occasionally a subject of scholarly research, a topic of policy debate and a subject for civil society actions. Even when we are invited to speak for ourselves, it is to listen to our personal stories - not to listen to our analysis. In our own communities too, it is the men who speak on our behalf.

While we are grateful to everyone who takes a genuine interest in our lives, we think it is the time to speak for ourselves, from our lived experience and about the issues that matter to us. For this reason we decided to launch a media hub in which migrant women will speak for themselves.

From the intersection of racism & misogyny to our sexual-reproductive rights; from the labour exclusion to our economic contributions; from the women collaborating in patriarchy to the impact of Europe's neoliberal policies; from the women in the refugee camps to the migrant women in politics; from now on, we will be speaking for ourselves.

MWRW will be producing articles, analysis, podcasts and video materials on monthly and bi-monthly basis. Those will be publicised on our web-site, social media channels and will be distributed to our partners, power holding institution and media.
